

Declaration of authorship for the Module Examination in accordance with § 9 of the Regulations of the Hochschule Bremen on the Conduct of Examinations in Digitalised Formats (Digital Examination Regulations).

Participation in a written examination in digitalised format requires the submission of this declaration of authorship. The declaration must be signed by the students taking part in the examination at the latest on the day of the examination and transmitted digitally to the university as a scanned document together with the examination tasks worked on. With the consent of the examiners, this can also be done before the examination date. Alternatively, the signed document may be sent by post. The examiners' instructions in this regard must be observed. If you send this declaration scanned as an attachment to an e-mail to the university, please keep the original for evidence purposes. The signed original can still be requested after the examination.

Important information:

The Hochschule Bremen only conducts the online examination without supervision in order to enable students to take examinations and obtain credit points under the existing special pandemic conditions without endangering their health. In doing so, it is dependent on the orderly behaviour of the examination candidates and must trust that there will be no attempts at cheating. Breaches of order that are undertaken contrary to the declaration of authorship can therefore be considered a particularly serious case of attempted cheating. According to § 16, paragraph 2 of the General Parts of the Bachelor's and Master's Examination Regulations, students who repeatedly or in a particularly serious way commit an attempt to deceive are usually struck off the student register.

Copyright notice: The teaching materials and examination tasks (assignment / sample solutions) are protected by copyright. Any use outside of the specific teaching and examination context (e.g., by uploading to platforms, creating screenshots, printing lecture notes, passing on to other students or other third parties – printed or digitally) is not permitted and is punishable by law. In addition, this may lead in particular to claims for injunctive relief and damages.
